School board fights oil grab

State education research forsees phenomenal growth for Hancock

by EDGAR PEREZ
Agents of the State Department of Education, gathering data here to determine feasibility of a new high school, told the Hancock County School Board Friday "From what we've found out in the last two days, your potential for growth could be fantastic."

"There are a lot of things taking place..." in Hancock County, the researchers said, "if you can provide the services..." that kind of development requires.

The investigators, representing the Education Department's research and development branch, are conducting an in-depth study at the request of the school board which is considering a second high school for the district.

The board has been under some pressure recently from residents of the Pearlinton and Lakeshore areas to provide a more centrally located secondary school for their children.

Students in the southwestern end of the county must travel to Hancock North Central once they have completed several variables affecting their research.

"We've done a lot of the preliminary work and gathered considerable hard data on things like population and growth from the people who look at the long-range economic picture and job situation," said Allan Evens of Jackson.

Superintendent of Schools Terry Randolph noted Evans and his colleague, Robert Stacy, have talked to representatives of the Army, NASA, utility companies, and the Mississippi Research and Development Center to get projections on population.

Evens said the next step in the study is to explore the impact the city school system has on the county system.

"We have to determine things like how many students you have released to the city system and how many would come back once you have a new high school—this study is very involved," Stacy said.

"And what one entity—such as the housing industry—does will have a considerable impact on the others in the county," he added.

We could set about deciding what would be the one best way to handle your situation, but we don't feel that's the way we should do this job," Evans reported.

"We need to give you alternatives, maybe four or five, including some you might not like," Evans continued.

"Then it will be up to you how to solve your problems...since you live here, you will probably be able to include important factors we could never know pleted the elementary grades, a daily round trip of up to 60 miles for some.

Under questioning from board member Monvel Cuevas about a possible completion date on the study, the investigators were vague, citing CHAMBER REPRESENTATIVE—Liz Bosley has been named Miss Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and will represent the Chamber at special events throughout the year. She is a teller at Hancock Bank's US-90 office in Bay St. Louis and is slated to participate in the City of Bay St. Louis' Miss Hospitality competition May 20. Miss Bosley is a 1976 graduate of Bay High and has attended Ricks Junior College in Idaho. She was a member of the National Honor Society at Bay High for two years.

about," he said.

"The information we are developing here will be useful to you in planning for the next 10 to 30 years," Evans pointed out.

"From what we've found so far, if you can pass a bond issue, your assessments will support the financing," Stacy replied to a question from board member Johnny Banks concerning the district's ability to support a school once it is built.

"But beyond that, we are not ready to answer your question yet," Stacy said.

Evens told the board "If we can come up with a projected high school enrollment in grades nine through 12 of at least 400, your new high school will be feasible."

"And this is what we are trying to determine—a projected enrollment of 200 will not support a proposal for a new school," he explained.

With Cuevas continuing his effort to pin down the researchers on a study completion date, Stacy noted "When you have to make a decision of this nature (construction of a second high school), you have to take your time."

Also at the Friday morning meeting, the board unanimously adopted a resolution opposing a proposed change in regulations affecting the area of land under which oil companies can drill from one rig.

Saga Petroleum of the United States and Marshall R. Young Oil Co. have petitioned the Mississippi Oil and Gas Board to adopt "temporary special field rules for the Waveland-Klin Gas Field in Hancock County."

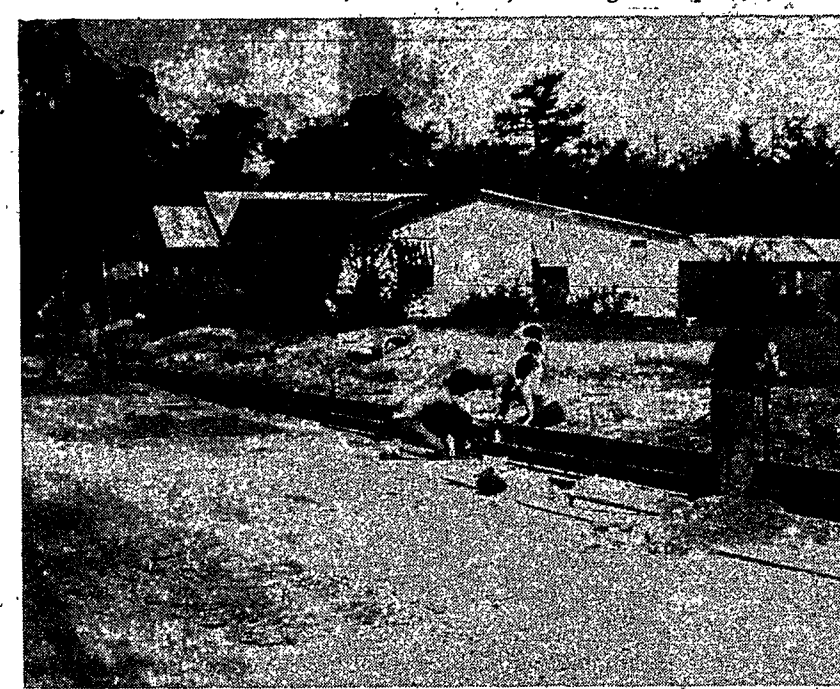

The oil companies' request would affect Townships Six South, Seven South, Eight South and Nine South; Ranges 14 West and 15 West, "which area includes a majority of the acreage in Hancock County," according to the school board resolution.

"There are eight 16th Section school lands included in the above area," the resolution indicates.

At present, directional drilling from one rig is confined to one section or 640 acres, according to Joseph Gex, school board attorney.

Gex said the petition from the oil companies to the Oil and Gas Board requests that area be expanded to two sections or "to not less than 1,200 acres or more than 1,360 acres for wells drilled to and producing below depths of 17,000 feet."

Investigation was continuing last night into the shooting death of Mrs. Janice C. Ladner of Kiln, whose home was set afire following the murder in an apparent effort to conceal the real cause of death.

Her daughter, Joy Lynn, 6, was also shot but managed to escape and alert neighbors to the multiple crime at about 2 a.m., April 8.

Unconfirmed reports at week's end indicated Hancock County Sheriff's deputies had uncovered major evidence, the first real breakthrough (MURDER-PAGE 4)

Half-mile markers along closed zone

proposed by MMCC

Controversial arrests of commercial shrimpers allegedly fishing inside the half-mile from shore closed area along the Mississippi Gulf Coast have prompted a move to have the restricted zone clearly marked.

The Mississippi Marine Conservation Commission, charged with enforcement of regulations designed to protect juvenile shrimp close to shore, is seeking a permit from U.S. Corps of Engineers to set markers at one mile intervals along the line one half-mile from shore from Bayou Caddy to the Alabama line.

"We have always had a problem in defining the half-mile line over the water," said Dr. Richard Leard, MMCC director.

"But under this proposed system, one marker will be visible from the next which should make patrolling the boundary line a lot easier," the official feels.

Leard said the Commission proposed the markers after receipt of a number of suggestions to that effect from fishermen arrested who contend they were actually outside the closed area.

The markers will be two-inch tubular polyvinylchloride pipe, 21 feet high and topped with orange flags. Leard said material costs will run some $700 with installation to be performed by commission employees.

"The Corps' Mobile office will accept public comment and opinion on the proposed markers until May 1.

J. NORTON HAAS has been selected as a Volunteer Activist for 1978. The award, being given in Mississippi for the seventh year, recognizes individual volunteer service to the community. A member of the St. Stanislaus Hall of Fame, recipient of the Silver Beaver Award, scouting's highest honor, Haas was specifically cited for his work in heading a fund raising drive which resulted in construction of a new school, his service as first president of Hancock General Hospital's Board of Directors, and his obtaining 400 rural acres for McLeod Park.

'How to get and keep a husband' PRJC players present stage show,

Pearl River College's chapter of Delta Psi Omega is sponsoring the production "How To Capture and Keep a Husband," 7 p.m. April 17 and 18 in the Moody Hall Auditorium.

According to Mrs. Connie Holmes, the group's advisor, everything is moving along as scheduled. "We have a very enthusiastic group," Holmes commented. "Everyone has been working hard and it seems that the production is sure to be a success."

"One asset that has helped us a great deal this year is the large number of students in our stage class. They have painted the sets and scenery so that the actors could get an early start with rehearsals and get used to their surroundings."

The central theme of the play is adequately described by its title. The narrator, known as Mrs. Quackenbush, is portrayed by Pat Trussell, with the other six characters making up the three couples who demonstrate the different methods of "How to capture and Keep a Husband."

The cast is composed of Mike Patten, portraying Kendrick; Rhonda Lewis as Oleta; Clayton Cody as Alastair; Winona is portrayed by Estelle Deleon; David Trelles portrays Osgood and Kathy Grantham is Charleen.

"Besides the actors, our stage craft class has some hard workers with a lot of responsibilities," Holmes said. Denise Peterson is the assistant director and will do most of the basic organization, Carrie May, who is the stage manager, has drawn most of the diagrams and kept the books.

"Nat Keating is in charge of publicity as well as the light coordinator. Cheri Stewart, Rhonda Lewis and Sandra Bayles have organized the program for the production, while Anthony Silas will take care of the music and sound effects in the production," Margie Richardson and Laurie Killingsworth will be in charge of make-up and costumes. Linda Overall and Lilah Silson are in charge of the stage properties. Debbie Stoufflet, John Brewer, and Kathy Grantham have also worked with the stage craft class in designing of the set and the basic organization. "Everyone has worked very diligently for the past few weeks," Holmes said, "and I think that they've done just a great job." The play is open to the public, admission is one dollar for adults, fifty cents for students.

Opinion/Ellis Cuevas

Some people wonder

We have at many times heard the phrase "The Chamber of Commerce doesn't do anything." We suspect there have been times when that expression would have been true, but not in recent years.

Friday, April 21, there will be a membership meeting of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, and non-members are invited, just as they are invited each month to the directors meetings.

This meeting will be held at the Wheel-Inn at 7:30 p.m. and will be an informal coffee.

Scheduled to speak are the Jackson legislators from our area, Senator Martin Smith and Representative J.P. Compretta.

This meeting will be very informal and if you have any questions about the Chamber of Commerce and what it does, or questions for our Senator or Representative, we are sure you will get them answered.

You would be amazed at the amount of community information you can receive with just a phone call to the Chamber's office.

The Chamber is sponsoring a big celebration for merchants in July, more information will be forthcoming. Each year the Chamber and The Farm Bureau co-sponsor a tour of farming operations in Hancock County.

Many things the Chamber does, and we don't realize it is doing them - the public forum before the last special election, Easter Sunrise Service, Blessing of the Fleet, Christmas tree lighting, Community Bargain Days and many more community endeavors.

The best way to find out if the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce does anything is to attend its meetings, you will be amazed at just how much it does.

Hope to see you Friday night, we will be there.

Dear Mr. Van Calsem:

Thank you for your letter of April 5 concerning our wave pool at Buccaneer State Park.

The prices quoted in your letter are only suggested entrance fees which are in line with other wave pools that have been built; however, I am well aware that our senior citizens are not capable of paying a high admission price over a long period of time. With this in mind, there is every possibility that our senior citizens will be offered a discount admission fee. It is far too soon to establish prices as the wave pool will not be in operation for at least another year.

Thank you again for your letter.
Sincerely yours, doubling of allowable acreage will effectively cut in half royalties and severance taxes from wells drilled to a depth of 17,000 feet and below.

In addition to expressing the board's opposition to the proposal, the resolution asks help from Attorney General A. F. Summer.

"He is hereby requested to aid and assist this board in opposing said petition and protecting the rights and interests of the state, the owners of royalty in the said area...and in particular, the school children of Hancock County," the resolution states.

The Oil and Gas Board will conduct a hearing on the oil companies' petition at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday in the second floor auditorium of the Woolfolk State Office Building, Northwest Street, Jackson.

Randolph outlined several provisions of new laws affecting the district which were passed at the last legislative session. They included:

-Allowance of a shortened school year to as few as 165 days in the event of unavoidable calamity such as energy shortages or violent weather.

-Establishment of a district's option of paying into a state unemployment compensation fund or maintaining its own fund. Randolph said the Hancock County District's best choice is to maintain its own fund.

Requirement of municipal school systems to provide transportation for all students living one mile or more from the school. Randolph said the Hancock District will realize some $3,000 additional in state transportation monies as a result of the square miles in all districts being more accurately reported. Hancock will pick up areas previously claimed by the Picaune and Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School Districts.

-Allowance of 12-month operating year for vocational-technical facilities which have programs planned to cover the time span.

In addition, Randolph noted under provisions of U.S. Public Law 94-142 providing for the education of handicapped children, the district will have to conduct a house-to-house survey before September to enumerate every child between the ages of six and eighteen years living in the district.

In other action, the board:

-Approved purchase of 48-inch exhaust fans for the Hancock North Central gymnasium.

Adopted a revised student check-out policy requiring personal appearance of a parent or his previously designated representative at the school to get a student excused from class.

-Named a committee to study a problem of excessive heat in the elementary classrooms of Hancock North Central.

-Accepted the resignation of teacher Elwyn Wilkinson of Hancock North Central.

-Approved employment of Mrs. Marion Simpson as teacher at Gulfview Elementary for remainder of current school year.

-Declined action on transfer of Miss Barbara Kinnebrew from HNC library to Gulfview library next year pending receipt of her request.

The People's Business

THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

The political campaign trail in Mississippi is beginning to heat up - if it ever cools at all.

At stake at the end of the freshest trail is a seat in the United States Senate and several seats in the Congress.

Today, obviously, more citizens are involved in the governmental process in Mississippi than ever before. As a reminder, then, here are a few suggestions for involvement in this year's elections:

-First, be sure you are properly registered to vote and make a commitment now to vote in primaries and in the general election.

-Study the candidates and the issues. Ask questions. Search for insight into the candidates' ideals, principles, and interests. Become an informed voter.

-Based upon this study, select your candidate or candidates and go to work for them.

-Become a volunteer worker. Don't leave the election to others.

-Help get out the vote on election day.

Soybean hay set for cattle

Soybean hay could be the alternative to limited supplies of quality forage and low cattle prices, according to an article in the April issue of Soybean Digest.

"Many bean growers with unprofitable cattle operations have taken a critical look at both bean hay and baled bean stubble," Vance Ehmke writes.

Mississippi farmer Trust Allen has put up 15 acres of soybean hay for his small Angus herd for the past 5 years, and doesn't harvest a single acre as beans. Allen figures at 14 percent protein, his soybean hay costs 95 cents a 60-pound bale and saves on protein supplement, compared to at least $1.25 per bale of grass hay.

Dr. Hiram Palmertree, Mississippi State University agronomist agrees that whole bean hay makes good feed. He encourages producers to put beans up for hay when land is not a limiting factor.

"If there's a problem with bean hay, it's low energy and high fiber," he said. "Even then it's not bad feed for dry cows, or even for cows with calves if enough bean hay is fed or supplemented with a little energy."

Baling is an excellent way to salvage a crop damaged by weeds, disease, or drought, he said. Soybean hay cut from the bud to early bloom stage can have as high as 18 to 20 percent protein.

Beans swathed for hay will take longer to dry before haling, Palmertree noted. A seeding rate of one and one-half to two bushels an acre reduces stem size, speeds up drying time and possibly cuts down on feed wasted by cattle.

"If you don't want to cut your beans for hay, consider stubble as a low cost roughage source," he said. "With a little supplementing, it can be a real lifesaver for a roughage-short cattleman."

MILK PRODUCTION

RELEASED: April 13 1978

MILK PRODUCTION

Production of milk in Mississippi during March is estimated at 76 million pounds, the Mississippi Crop and Livestock Reporting Service announced today. This is the same as a year earlier.

There were 110,000 milk cows on farms during the month, four percent below a year earlier. Milk production per cow averaged 690 pounds, 25 pounds above March 1977.

UNITED STATES

Milk production totaled 10,528 million pounds in March, down less than one percent from March 1977.

Average production per cow was 967 pounds, six pounds more than a year earlier and 38 pounds over March 1976.

Milk cows were estimated at 10,883,000 head during March, off one percent from last year.

The Necaise Crossing 4-H Club held its monthly meeting on April 6th in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton (Sonny) Ladner. After the business session, refreshments were enjoyed. There was a bubble gum contest and the winner was Terri Ladner.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ladner on May 4th. A leader's training program will be held May 2 also in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ladner. Anyone who is interested in this worthwhile program is asked to attend the training program.

There will be a rifle match on Saturday, April 15 at the Bayou LaCroix dirt pit. This is for all members of the Necaise Crossing 4-H Club, including both Junior and Senior boys and girls.

The club is now making plans for a camp which is to be held in May in Sardis, but there will be more information on this later.

We would like to congratulate Dale and Karen Necaise. They were united in marriage on Saturday, April 8 in Our Lady of the Gulf Church in Bay St. Louis. Karen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Adam of Bay St. Louis and Dale is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lugis Necaise, Jr. of White Cypress.

Maternal grandparents of the bride are Mrs. Birdie Mae Ladner of Kiln and the late Earl Ladner, Sr. Paternal grandparents are Mrs. Eula McArthur and the late Emile Adam.

Maternal grandparents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Tamas Ladner of Rocky Hill, and paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Lugis Necaise, Sr. of White Cypress. The couple are making their home in Bay St. Louis.

A bridal shower for Karen Adam, bride-elect of Dale Necaise was held on Sunday afternoon April 2 in the home of Mrs. Lillian Ladner in Rocky Hill. Hostesses for the shower were Mrs. Mary Green and misses Susie and Cindy Necaise.

Our sympathies are extended to the family of Mrs. Eula Mae Garriga. Mrs. Garriga was a resident of Fenton Community. She is the mother of Mrs. Yvonne Spiers of Sellers and Mrs. Norma Jean Cuevas of White Cypress.

Our sympathies are also extended to the family of S. T. Smith.

Get well wishes are sent out to all the sick of our area and especially Bernice Necaise of White Cypress and Mrs. Vera Necaise of Fenton.

The Church Council of White Cypress held their regular monthly meeting on Saturday evening at the church. Plans are underway for the formal dedication of the new church complex. The date has been set for May 21.

State to inspect own grain

David Mangum, assistant administrator, Federal Grain Inspection Service, Washington, D.C., will delegate authority to Mississippi to perform official inspection and weighing of grain at export elevators, at 8:30 a.m., Tuesday, in office of Jim Buck Ross, Agriculture Commissioner, Jackson.

Mississippi is one of nine states to receive such authority. To be eligible to receive the delegation of authority, a state had to be providing grain inspection and weighing services at export port locations as of July 1, 1976.

States applying for permanent delegation are required to pass a 27 point compliance review to insure that they are qualified to provide competent weighing services at export locations.

Grain to be exported must be inspected and graded upon arrival at the port and also before departure.

Also present at the delegation ceremony will be representatives of the regional office from Atlanta, Georgia, as well as the field office in Mobile, Alabama. You are cordially invited to attend the above described ceremony.

SOYBEAN PLANTING DATES

Maximum soybean yields are usually obtained from May plantings. Producers with adequate equipment and labor to complete soybean plantings before mid-June may want to begin in late April.

Yields of earlier plantings are often reduced less than those of late plantings. However, plantings earlier than May should be restricted to the northern two-thirds of the state because of the day length sensitivity of soybeans. Even then, plantings generally should not begin before April 20 or only after the soil temperature is at least 68 degrees.

Late April plantings generally result in slower soybean emergence, greater risk of stand failure, shorter plants, lower pod height and slightly lower yields.

PROVIDE GOOD DRAINAGE

Good drainage is the key to good crop stands. Water should not stand around seed or seedlings. Make early plantings on soils with good internal and surface drainage. When soils have poor internal drainage, good surface drainage becomes even more important. Leaving the rows two to three inches above the middles at planting will give good surface drainage without leaving the seedbed too high for precision cultivation and chemical application. Planting on the bed will insure good stands of early planted crops.

FERTILIZER PLACEMENT

There is renewed interest in band placement of fertilizer for row crops. Band placement will improve recovery of applied fertilizer, especially phosphorus, in acid soils of low fertility. A broadcast rate 50 percent higher than the banded rate is

WEATHER SUMMARY:

High pressure over the area kept Mississippi warm and mostly dry for the second consecutive week. Temperatures were above normal throughout the state. In the Delta temperatures averaged 10 degrees above normal and elsewhere about five degrees above normal. The lowest temperature recorded was 41 degrees at Winona on the 1st and the highest temperature was 89 degrees at Merrill, Charleston and Moorhead on three different days. The greatest 24-hour rainfall was .03 inch at Cleveland on April 4. Temperatures continued warm over the weekend.

Shower activity was very spotty with Stoneville reporting the greatest amount of .08 inch.

CROP SUMMARY: Clear weather allowed farmers to stand in the fields all week and land preparation activities proceeded rapidly. Farmers were planting rice, corn, and cotton during the week; however, with soils drying rapidly some farmers are waiting for rain to settle seedbeds before planting.

Soil moisture supplies were short. An average of 6.1 days was suitable for fieldwork compared to 5.7 days last week and 1.6 days last year.

About 68 percent of the acreage intended for spring planted crops had been plowed compared with 63 percent last year and 46 percent for the average. Irish potatoes were 84 percent planted compared with 80 percent last year. Corn was about 36 percent planted compared with 23 percent last year and 17 percent for the average.

Cotton planting is just getting underway with about one percent of the acreage planted. Rice planting progressed rapidly with about 36 percent of the acreage planted. Last year rice planting was just beginning. Winter wheat was 53 percent jointing compared to 58 percent last year. Oats were 47 percent jointing compared to 50 percent last year. Winter wheat and oats were in fair to good condition. Livestock and pastures were in fair to good condition.

COMMENTS

TALLAHATCHIE CO. "A solid week of good weather put us in excellent shape as far as land preparation is concerned. We actually need a good one to two inch rain to settle the beds before planting."

MONROE CO. "Most corn planted and most up to a good stand. Gardens are being planted. It is getting dry here."

SHARKEY CO. "Cotton land is ready to plant but beds are too loose and dry. Soybean land preparation is well ahead of schedule."

ARCHAEOLOGY AND FARMLANDS

Plowed fields over Mississippi have provided local and visiting collectors of Indian artifacts with arrowheads, broken bits of pottery and unusual and little understood stones for generation. And it wasn't until a certain field or area showed up an unusual volume or type of artifacts that word eventually reached state historical or archaeological officials to help bring such discoveries into proper analytical and preservation focus.

Only after many of this state's valuable Indian artifacts were claimed by most anybody that came along was it that a Mississippi Antiquities Act was passed in 1970 to make it unlawful for any person to enter another's property in quest of historic relics without the permission of the landowner.

Because of the lack of legal restrictions earlier in history, Mississippi already has lost much of its valuable archaeological heritage. As an example, the Buffalo Bill Museum at Cody, Wyoming, has a large and impressive display of Indian arrowheads from Mississippi, apparently bought from private collectors. Not only does this represent a loss of good museum display material, but the absence of research on the source of the relics is an even greater loss to Mississippi archaeological studies.

One of the most valuable Indian village discoveries in this state has been at the Humber site in Coahoma county. We interviewed J.F. Humber, Jr., this week at the site to pass on his experiences to help guide other farmers in the event of similar discoveries on their farmlands.

Humber related that he first discovered fragments of Indian pots in a cottonfield near his home west of Clarksdale while testing a new plow that went deeper than usual. Friends helped him check out the discovery and began to unearth all kinds of relics from a 'Roundhead' Indian village that once occupied that spot. Some of the valuable Indian pots were dug out and sold commercially by the public. Humber and his son recovered many beautiful and archaeologically important pots and other relics themselves which were turned over to appropriate public institutions for display in the state. In the meantime, public knowledge of the relic find spread, and the Humber property was invaded by relic seekers. Many dug at night or while the Humber family was away at church on Sundays. It got so bad he suffered tractor damages from running into newly dug and uncovered holes in the fields. That's when he had to declare the property off limits to the public.

Nevertheless Humber has cooperated with an extensive archaeological investigation at the site by a skilled research team from the Cottonland Educational and Recreational Foundation of Greenwood, and teams from the Mississippi Department of Archives and History. As a result the state today benefits from the painstaking study of the site by trained personnel, and Mississippi history has been enriched by their findings that reveal many significant facts about this prehistoric culture.

Humber reports that there is considerable evidence that this was a superior group of Indians reported by Hernando DeSoto in that area and it may have been in this vicinity that DeSoto discovered the Mississippi River.

The river is within sight of the former Indian village.

In preparation of this report we consulted with Mississippi Department of Archives and History director Elbert Hilliard who asked other Mississippi farmers who discover artifacts in their fields to report this information to: Sam McGahay, Senior Archaeologist, Mississippi Department of Archives and History, Jackson, MS 39205, or call: 354-6218 so a team of specialists can make arrangements to examine the site. He also urged landowners making such discoveries to plot findings on topographic maps and put the artifacts in bags identified as to exact location to guide the research team.

Obviously, despite historic spoils of many sites, others remain to be discovered and help unravel the mysteries of prehistoric cultures that lived here long before the arrival of present day inhabitants. Mississippi's heritage will be enhanced if future findings are directed to museums instead of flea markets and commercialization.

PROSPECTIVE PLANTINGS

COTTON PLANTING

As of April 1, Mississippi farmers reported intentions to plant 1,370,000 acres of cotton in 1978, 220,000 acres above the Jan. 1, 1978 estimate. If these intentions are realized, acreage planted in 1978 would be one percent below the 1,380,000 acres planted in 1977.

SOYBEAN ACREAGE

Soybean prospective plantings as of April 1, 1978, are expected to total a new record high of 4,000,000 acres, up seven percent from the 3,750,000 acres planted in 1977. This is 150,000 acres below the Jan. 1, 1978 intentions estimate.

THE VOICE OF THE SOUTHWEST MISSISSIPPI GULF COAST

Hay bales stretching off into the horizon as far as the eye can see present a pastoral, picturesque farm scene.

But in recent years, the shape of these bales has changed. Now, large round bales are appearing more and more in some areas, providing a cylindrical contrast to the customary rectangular bales.

In this photo alone, the bales found in the portion of the field pictured represent nearly 50 tons of hay. With hay prices soaring in many areas due to the drought conditions, this farmer in southern Minnesota has a stable investment in this cutting of hay.

Once the hay is cut and rolled into round bales, a major task still remains: getting those bales from the field to storage and eventually feeding areas.

For efficient transport from the field, a Sperry New Holland round-bale handler can move four such bales—up to three tons of hay at a time. A single-bale mover permits fast relocation of a bale for feeding.

Normal crop acreage must be estimated

Every farm in Hancock and Pearl River counties scheduled to receive 1978 crop protection must have a normal crop acreage established for the farm.

According to Franklin A. Gennin, county director, Pearl River-Hancock County ASCS Office, a normal crop acreage cannot be established for a farm until the farm operator reports all of the 1977 crop uses on the farm.

Gennin said there are many farms in Pearl River and Hancock Counties for which the operator has not reported the 1977 crop acreage. Any operator who has not made this report should come to the county office immediately and do so.

Gennin emphasized that the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 provides substantial protection to farmers who produce cotton, feed grains, wheat, rice, and certain other crops, and this protection is applicable to the 1978 crop year. Nevertheless, in order for this protection to be applicable to a farm, a normal crop acreage must be established for the farm. This normal crop acreage must be established not later than May 1.

Therefore, it is of utmost importance that any farm operator who has not already reported all of his 1977 crop acreages to the county ASCS office do so at once.
